Happy New Year!

And some thoughts on Quilts, Gifts, Memories and Stories...

In my house, I have a sturdy curtain rod on which to hang my quilts. At times, there is one large quilt hanging there, but at others, there may be one or two small quilts. Today, there are 7 (see next page). While decorating for the holidays, I pulled out a stack of smaller quilts and decided to hang them all up on the quilt rod. This was done, of course, for my own enjoyment. However, last night, when my son was commenting on them, I realized that each quilt is a story worth telling—no matter if it's short or long, easy or complex. My stories all involve my mom. On the far right is Sunbonnet Sue. This was a gift from mom. It was probably made in her early days of making quilts. I remember having it in college or shortly thereafter, certainly before I had any appreciation for Sunbonnet Sue. I usually hung it from the top of a door with thread and a thumb tack. It's puffy from the polyester batting, but I love the simplicity of it – certainly a favorite.

The pair of candy canes was a Christmas gift from mom about 15 years ago. I love candy canes. Maybe it's the red and white contrast, maybe it's just the red—I have always loved red. I never asked her about them; I just accepted them as a beautiful gift. I'd like to hear her story about them now...

The two quilts between the candy canes, the "Christmas Tree" and the "Christmas Manger", were kit gifts from my mom during the 10 years in Indiana. The Christmas tree pattern she gave with tiny pieces of pre-cut fabric she had chosen. This was not a kit I would have purchased myself, but I found myself really enjoying the process of creating this tiny quilt. I added buttons and ribbons. There are gingerbread buttons on the tree representing the people in my family and buttons of toys beneath the tree. The train wheels are buttons, and buttons decorate the border. Lovely memories.

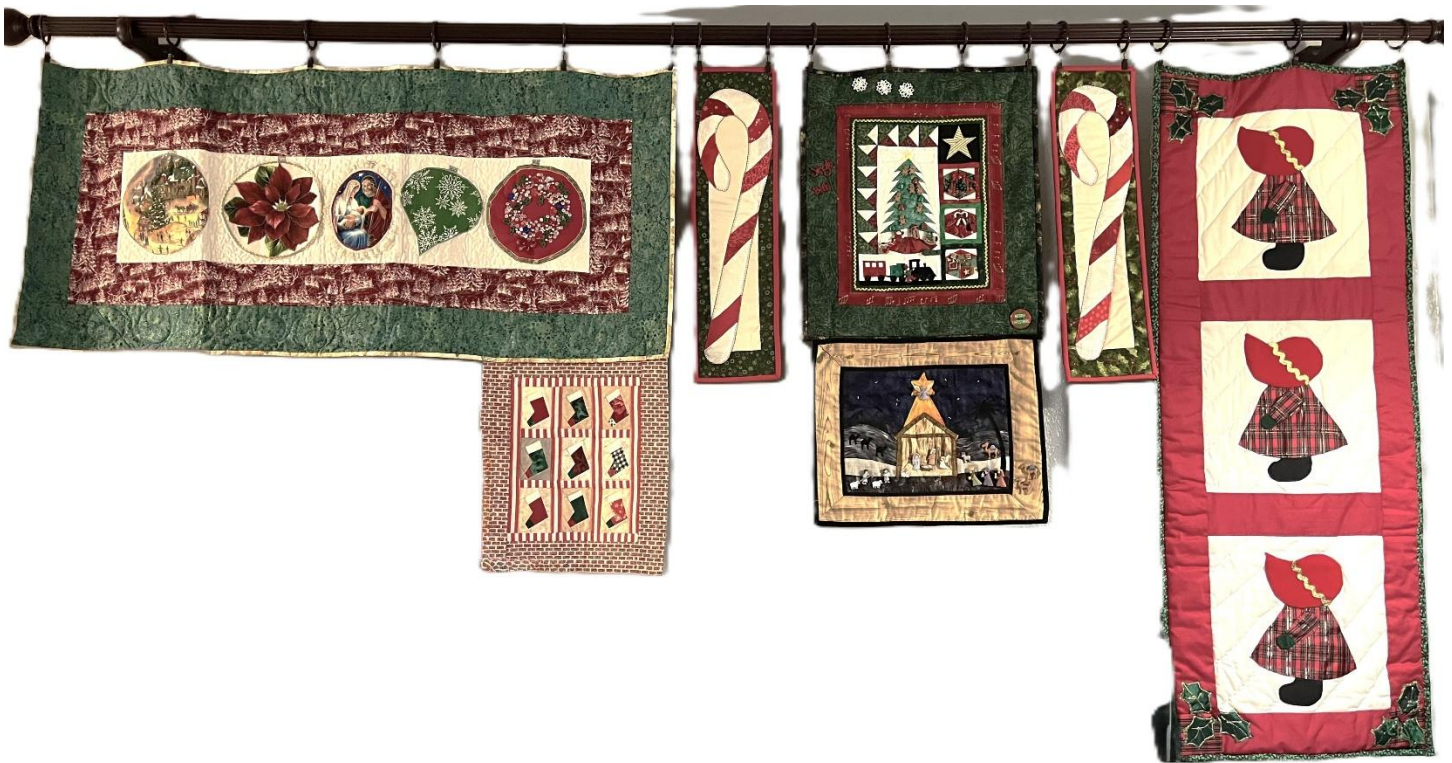

The "Christmas Manger" just came as a pattern with Nativity and shepherd buttons. I remember working on part of it while spending Christmas with my aunt (the one I made the African quilt for), my parents, and my family in Sarasota, FL. It was a very special Christmas. My aunt was a fantastic hostess—but that is another story. We went fabric shop-hopping looking for the right fabric for the star. Later, I found wise men and camel buttons, so there are lots of camels in the scene.

"Christmas Stockings" was a gift made by mom. Once again, I don't know the story. It is cute, I love the brick fabric, but am unaware of her story. Now I wish...just one question could have opened up a whole world of information...

But I do know the story of the final quilt. When mom moved from Indiana to California, she had to downsize significantly. My sister-in-law really wanted the Christmas ornament quilt. I was feeling generous and let her take it, but I felt sad afterwards. I finally expressed my sadness to mom and she said, "I'll make you another one!" And, she did. I like it even better. She even cut up one of her Christmas sweatshirts with a wreath on it to make an ornament. And it has more memories--it was one of the first quilts I used my new Bernina longarm to quilt. I was just learning, and now I laugh at how difficult it was to make that computer do the simple thing I wanted it to do.

Quilts, gifts, memories, stories.... Do you share your quilt story with those you gift a quilt to? Maybe they don't ask. So, maybe you can ask, "Would you like to hear the story about this quilt?" It might not be complex; it could be as simple as, "I know you like candy canes and I thought of you when I saw this pattern and make it for you". Happy Quilting during 2026!!

COMMUNICATIONS

Susan C., Chair of the 2026 Quilt Walk, wants to remind the guild members to begin making small quilts and blocks to enter into the Quilt Walk. Time is flying by, and we need 100+ small blocks by May! She will be bringing a sign up sheet to the next meeting so you can create a block for a specific business, if you choose.

The next Quilt Show meeting has been rescheduled to Friday, January 9 at 10:30 at Sew-n-Sew. Please come and join the team!

Shari Lyons, Communications Committee Chair

HOSPITALITY

The Quarterly Raffle at December's meeting was won by Susan MacDonald! I hope she is enjoying all the goodies that were packed in the bag.

Because of all the gifting at the December meeting, we skipped the nametag raffle for the month. Be prepared next meeting by wearing your nametag as we will return to drawing a name for a prize (or two).

Our next Sew Sunday at the Senior Center is on Sunday, January 25th from 10:30 until about 2:30.

If you know of a member that is under the weather or might need a pick-me-up, please contact me to send them a card.

Thank you,

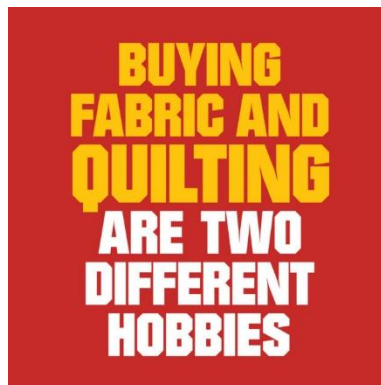

Cindi Jo Wiley, Hospitality Committee Chair
